

A Day on the Hill

It was Saturday. David and Sarah wanted to have some fun.

“Dad, will you take us up the hill today?” asked Sarah.
“Yes Dad,” said David. “May I take my kite with me?”

“Yes David,” said Dad. “That will be fun. Sarah, go and tell Mum that it is time to go!”

Sarah ran to tell Mum.

David ran to get his kite.

Then Dad, Mum, David and Sarah set out from home. They went up the hill.

On the hill were many trees and many flowers.

“Children,” said Dad, “Let’s play a game. Let’s see how many colours God has in his world!”

“I see one,” said Sarah. “The sky is blue.”

“My turn,” said David. “The trees are green and so is the grass. There is not only one colour of green. I see lots of greens!”

“Good, David! Your turn now Mum,” said Dad.

“Come and look,” said Mum. “See these little flowers. They are yellow and black.”

“Your turn Dad,” said David. “What can you see?”

“I like these pink flowers, See how tall they are!”

“Now how many colours have we seen? Let’s count the colours,” said Sarah.

“A blue sky – one.
Green trees, green grass – two.
Little yellow and black flowers – three, four,
And Dad’s pink flowers, that makes five!”

“Dad! Mum!” called David. “Quick! Look up here! Look at this bird. It is orange, blue, green, red and yellow! It has five colours! Isn’t God wonderful?”

“Yes David. God is wonderful. This bird is a parrot. Now we have six colours we have seen – orange too.”

David ran on.

“Dad,” he called. “May I fly my kite here? This is a good spot. See I have room to run with my kite.”

David held the string of the kite, and away he ran. Up, up, up went the kite, up into the air.

“Mum! Look at the colours on my kite – blue, green, pink and yellow. The colours are beautiful aren’t they?”

“Sarah, would you like a turn?”

“Yes please,” said Sarah, as she took the string. “This is fun!”

A song to sing: God is wonderful (from Couldn't be finer)
